

To whom it may concern: I spend a good deal of my time on the open roads in and around st. Louis, Mo. The traffic and weather channel from XM radio has improved my ability to avoid delays to and from my customers. The free radio stations in this area do not give any comprehensive road problems that XM does. XM is the best thing I have ever had. It costs me money to have this luxury and I do not feel it is infringing upon anyone else, since I pay for it. If the free stations would take a lesson from XM they would increase their listening audience instead of a continuous decrease. This sounds very familiar to the old saying "Nobody will pay to watch anything on TV."

This is a free country so why not let the market decide instead of somebody who has their hand out and puts a buck or two into their own pocket.

Sincerely,

Lynn Longseth
